Population count begins in Upland

By DON GREEN

Staff Writer How many people live in Upland?

A special census has begun to answer that question with a door- to- door count of residents, and city officials are banking on the fact more people will bring Upland more money along with better planning information.

And those officials are reasonably sure history will not repeat itself. A special county census in 1975 found 1,-147 fewer people in Upland than the state was giving it

The state Department of Finance currently credits Upland with a population of 41.681.

Anthony Andrade, Upland's director of finance, noted state subventions -- money returned to the city from state-collected taxes - amount to $26.29 per person an-

If the census finds, for example, an extra 4,000 residents, that would mean $105,160 more for city coffers

Planning Director Bill Young has estimated between 45,000 and 50,000 people currently live in Upland. The Bureau of the Census of the U.S. Department of Commerce, which will conduct the 10-year federal census in 1980, is supervising the special count Why run a special census less than a year before the federal government undertakes its own count? Both Andrade and Young pointed to the dollars in-

Although the Bureau of the Census will mail its forms by next April, certification of those figures for use in calculating state allotments poses a lag for their use. So, the count from Upland's special census could apply to state funding - meaning thousands more dollars Andrade noted that in addition to state funds, population is part of a complex formula for figuring federal revenue - sharing dollars, and a higher population could again mean more money Of the $26.29, $8.68 of the amount is collected under two sections of the state gasoline tax and must be used by the city for street maintenance and construction and other traffic - related projects, Andrade said. He added the rest of the state subventions - motor vehicle license fees, cigarette tax, highway carriers' uniform business tax and off-highway motor vehicle license fees - wind up in the city's general fund and Upland has discretion over their use. In February, the city council authorized spending not to exceed $25,000 for the census. Using that amount and 18 months for the period the count would figure in state allocations, Andrade calculated Upland would need to find just 635 more people to break even on the census. Joyce Ulstrup has set up shop in the recreation department annex on North Second Avenue and is supervising the count for the Bureau of the Census. Some 60 "enumerators" under five crew chiefs are ex-nected to finish the count within two weeks, she said, adding that verification will be complete by the end of July. Ulstrup said residents will be asked the names of persons living at their homes, their relationship to the head of the household, sex, race and date of birth in year and

She stressed the confidentiality of the responses is guaranteed by law, no questions will be asked about citizenship and individual answers will not be available to the city or any governmental agency for law enforce-

Unlike the federal census, residents are under no comulsion to answer the questions, she added.

'Most people are cooperative - if they weren't we couldn't do it," Ulstrup said.

Enumerators will work evenings and Saturdays to complete their task, and several are bilingual, she said. Mrs. Ulstrup advised residents who will be on vacation during July 9 to 20 to leave the information with a neighbor, or to call the census office, 981-5366.

Enumerators can be identified by their photo badges. The census takers will also be marking the type of housing residents are living in.

Young indicated a breakdown on the some 17,000 housing units in the city will be useful in correcting a bias he sees in the 1975 census.

Annual state updates on population for subvention funds use occupancy factors, and Young said Upland's short apartment boom in the early 1970s has been throwing off those figures. Apartments generally have a lower occupancy than single-family homes, which have accounted for most of Upland's recent growth.

Upland building figures in the first half of 1979 declined compared to the same period last year, and the slowdown in residential construction was marked by a 45 percent drop in the number of houses receiving building permits. Through June, Upland has issued building permits for 227 singlefamily homes having a total valuation of $15.28 million. In the first half of 1978, the city granted permits for 415 singlenomes with a valuation of $26.71 million. Permits for eight apartment units industrial construction are also down, although the drop is not as

City officials and others close to the housing industry cited several causes for the drop in new housing starts in Upland.

Generally heading the list were the increasing cost of new housing and high interest rates. Other factors mentioned included the influence of past moratoriums and continued limits on sewer connections, along with the city's two-year-old growth management

City Manager Lee Travers said, "I think it's being observed all over the area. Higher priced houses are not selling as well as before.

Eugene Bello - outgoing president of the Upland Chamber of Commerce and owner of an Upland realty firm - said the cost of a new home weighs more heavily in the slowdown than currently high interest rates.

A home priced at $60,000 purchased at a 12 percent interest rate will move on the market while a $250,000 home at 10 percent will not, he said.

Ken Willis - executive director of the Baldy View Chapter of the Building Industry Association said many people fail to realize that when they are paying over 11 percent interest for a conventional mortgage builders are paying more for their construction loans, also contributing to the slowdown.

After piling up records in building permits and total valuation for new homes through 1977, the figures dropped off slightly in 1978.

The city issued permits for 839 single-family homes last year compared to 918 in 1977, but permits for multiple-family homes rose from 176 to 277 units.

Both categories are well behind last year's pace for the first six

Willis said, "Upland's seen its last

Residential development is approaching the point where Upland will gradually become a built-out city, Willis indicated. Construction of homes is now geared to "infilling" undeveloped pockets, he Asked if recent levels of building activity could be repeated, Willis said, "I can't see on the map where they're going to put it."

Upland tentatively offers 7.5% raise to police

Upland has reached a tentative one-year agreement with its police officers, granting them a 7.5 percent pay increase retroactive to May 1. City Manager Lee Travers said Monday a formal resolution on the memorandum of understanding will be presented to the city council Monday. He noted the council informally indicated its support for the agreement last week.

Finance Director Anthony Andrade said the 7.5 percent pay increase comes to just over $100,000 total for the 57 sworn officers for the current fiscal year.

have the retroactive pay back to May 1 on pay checks issued July 25. A 7.5 percent increase for virtually all city employees has been included in the proposed budget for 1979-80, which the council is also scheduled to adopt Monday.

He added that the city hopes to Travers said negotiations are continuing with the city's two other employee groups, firefighters and miscellaneous employees.

Both groups are represented by Local 690 of the Service Employees International Union AFL-CIO. The Upland Police Officers Association negotiates directly with the city manager.

The city council earlier this year granted a 5 percent pay increase for all city employees, effective March 1. That increase followed a state Supreme Court decision declaring a provision of SB 154 unconstitutional.

The provision prohibited local governments from receiving Proposition 13 bail-out money if cost-of-living pay increases exceeded those for state workers, who had their raises, for the most part, vetoed by Gov. Edmund G. Brown Jr.
In addition to the pay increase, the city has agreed to modify its uniform allowance for police officers beginning July 1, 1980.

Upland has agreed to provide adequate uniforms to police officers at the time they are hired, and the balance remaining from the current $120 uniform allowance may be carried over into the next year.

The maximum the uniform allowance may reach is $240.

But employee morale a problem

Grand jury is satisfied with county operations

Staff Writer

The 1978-79 grand jury offered only praise or mild criticism of most county departments in a final report it released this week.

For the most part, we found the county well managed by hardworking supervisors and many other dedicated department heads and employees," Alvin C. Hancock, the jury foreman, said in his introduction to the report.

The grand jury commended the board of supervisors and other county officials for their performance in the first year after Proposition 13, the state constitutional amendment that slashed property taxes for countywide services by more than $40 million.

The grand jury's report says: The board of supervisors, other elective officers and all career administrators have tried to comply with the demands and spirit of roposition 13 and appear to have aken an overall orderly approach to the new fiscal situation.

They seem to have analyzed and aluated all aspects of county overnment to assure maximum use of available funds in an effort to maintain a good level of service to

But the grand jury expressed its concern about the effect of Proposition 13 upon what it saw as alreadypoor employee morale Its report

"Morale - the intangible component of efficiency - is low among county employees, and exists at many levels of responsibility. eroding competence, destroying initiative and impeding progress.

"Throughout the county rumor is rife, playing a subtle role, timeconsuming at best, ultimately capable of serious disruption....

'The effect of rumors, having older and more established roots than those spawned by Proposition 13, became evident when the rate of (employee) attrition reached approximately 18 percent even though retroactive pay raises were made.

The grand jury recommended several steps to improve morale among the 8,000 county employees.

These include better communication of changes in organization and policy, more vigorous solicitation of money- and time-saving suggestions from employees, and greater visibility of agency administrators and department heads among the employees.

The grand jury said "generally unwarranted" public criticism of county services and employees has had "an abrasive, detrimental effect on employee morale." The grand jury report recommended steps to improve the public perception of county employees and ser-

The grand jury was not complimentary of every county department. In a spearate report the jury recommended a reorganization of the sheriff's department to save money and make better use of the department's top managers.

Van Kralingen said he started his business in his Long Beach home about 21/2 years ago, building about 12 carts a year. Eventually, the business grew to the point where he was producing about 40 carts a year, mainly in his garage.

With that much growth in the business, Van Kralingen decided to take on some business partners and try to expand further by establishing the new Upland Carts built by Van-K are of the enduro type, where the driver's position is nearly prone, and are designed specifically for racing. Power comes from 100cc motorcycle engines. Twinengine, 30-horsepower models can reach 120 mph.

beating down on your head, the smog stinging your eyes and your feet cooking on the pavement, a swimming pool can look very

But for a youngster who does not know how to swim, taking a dip in the water could prove to be disastrous.

That is why the West End YMCA is trying to make the whole community water safe by sponsoring a backyard swimming program this summer in 24 private

It is the third year the YMCA has sponsored the program which is meant to acclimatize younger children to the water and teach older ones the basics of swimming. Mouth-to-mouth resuscitation and basic lifesaving techniques are also taught in the classes.

Holger Paetau, originator and director of the area program, said this is its most successful summer

Paetau said the program in water safety and lifesaving has grown from about 200 the first year to an expected 700 to 800 kids this

There are four different types of classes offered - 3 months old to walking, walking to 4 years old, 40 inches or taller and Mommy and Me classes where a parent is shown how to teach a child.

Paetau offered a tip for young children to prevent "water shock" in their summer swimming sessions. To keep children from being upset at radical water temperature differences, parents should gradually lower their children's bath water temperature.

The only problem with the backyard swimming program, Paetau says, is that only beginners and advanced beginners can be taught because the pools are small.

The pools are donated by residents and Paetau says he is offered more pools than he can possibly manage in the program. The only thing donating pool owners get is free swimming lessons for their children, Paetau said. Three full-time instructors are involved in giving lessons from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

Two weeks of swimming lessons cost $12 for YMCA members and $17 for non-members. Paetau says the prices have remained the same as last summer's.

Lessons are offered at two-week intervals through August 17, with the next session beginning Monday. Some of the sessions have already reached the 10-student maximum, but there is still room, Paetau said.

Plans for the future include offering lessons in the fall and, next summer, lessons and recreational swimming might be offered by the YMCA at Alta Loma High School.

Anybody wanting more information on the swimming lessons should contact the West End YMCA in Ontario.

Caltrans asks bikers' advice

San Bernardino office of the state Department of Transportation (Caltrans) wants to know why you don't.

Department officials would also like those already using a bicycle to commute to work to suggest improvements which could be made along the routes and what other facilities could be made available to make the trip easier and safer.

Caltrans would also like to hear ideas about what it and private employers could do to make commuting by bicycle more attractive.

"We know the use of pedal power for commute(r) trips is growing," commented Bill Murray, Caltrans bicycle coordinator. "But we have no real idea how many people in Riverside and San Bernardino counties are now cycling to work or school. Nor do we have any real idea of how many people would consider switching from cars to bicycles if better facilities were available.

Caltrans has already taken the lead, according to Murray, who said the department's Sacramento headquarters has installed showers and 120 lockers for cyclists who commute to work.

The San Bernardino office has built a special fenced compound to provide additional security in its parking Murray said there are many reasons for cycling to work besides cutting the gasoline bill from a range of 12 to 36 cents a mile to less than 2 cents a mile.

Grand jury recommends sheriff's reorganization

By PETER WONG Staff Writer

The 1978-79 grand jury has recommended major reorganization of the sheriff's department to save money and make better use of the department's top managers.

In its final report, the grand jury said the department should get 60 to 100 additional deputies and other employees, fewer than the 190 Sheriff Frank Bland has requested from the board of supervisors.

These and other grand jury recommendations were based on a 277-page audit report prepared by Arthur Young and Co., a nationwide management consultant. The board of supervisors voted $60,000 for the audit in mid-January.

The supervisors are expected to consider the grand jury recommendations when they start public hearings on the 1979-80 county budget later this month. Bland and his top executives are expected to respond to the report at that time.

The grand jury made no comment on the department's lawenforcement record. But it was not wholly critical of the department.

The department currently has a high degree of enthusiasm and morale. This motivational factor is believed to be the foundation of a basically excellent agency and the key to future improvements," the grand jury report says.

In a key recommendation, the grand jury said the department should be reorganized into three bureaus commanded by assistant

The operations bureau would oversee all substations, the aviation division and a central unit that would provide patrol support and investigation of major crimes (homicide), narcotics and vice.

The support services bureau would include the jails, the crime laboratory, records and the civil and communications divisions

The third bureau would handle such administrative matters as budgeting, accounting, personnel, planning, research and training. Assistant sheriffs would be responsible to the undersheriff. The substations and divisions are supervised currently by a network of inspectors who report to a chief inspector. Administrative matters are handled by the sheriff's executive officer. The grand jury recommended an increase of 60 to 100 employees to the 919-member department, most of them to be assigned to supervision of the substations and the central jail in San Bernardino.

But it said the increase could be offset largely by eliminating 40 positions from the central detective division, which it said was overstaffed.

And it said the number of deputies assigned to patrols was "reasonable" and probably does not need to be increased significantly, although some transfers may be in The grand jury said the auditors it hired found it difficult to determine precisely how many additional deputies and other employees are required by the sheriff's department because of a lack of information. 'The department is in significant need of reliable information with which to plan its activities and allocate its resources," the grand

"For its size and complexity, the San Bernardino County Sheriff's Department is one of the most underautomated departments ever surveyed by this auditing firm. Its reporting and statistical systems are significantly lacking in controls. resulting in data that is unreliable and largely inaccurate."

The grand jury said the present system of 10 substations and 8 satellite stations outside San Bernardino limits the possibility of sharing deputies' workloads, requires too many supervisors and contributes to higher costs for radio dispatching of patrol cars and transportation of prisoners.

'The current allocation of substations and residential deputy posts ... possibly have been highly influenced by community political pressures," the report says. "This is not necessarily wrong; however, it is more expensive to operate than other alternatives.

The department had a budget of almost $25 million for the year which ended June 30.

CCC is training women

For the first time in its three-year history, the California Conservation Corps has more women than men enrolled in its training academy. Director B. T. Collins to recruit 400 women for what would be the first allwomen training class at its academy in Murphys. We have a tough one-

Adolescent abuse May be one of most overlooked crimes

By RITA BUSBY Staff Writer

"Adolescent abuse may be one of the most overlooked crimes in our society," an authority on child abuse says.

Adolescence, that age between 12 and 18, is described by Dr. Guy Hartman of Kaiser Foundation Hospital in Fontana, as a "process of pain.

And the pain of the sometimes gangling youngster with unsteady feet in two worlds - one with adults and another with children - is often magnified by abuse.

Dr. Hartman is a recognized authority on child abuse, and author of magazine articles on the subject.

Authority says this area ignored

He has spoken on child abuse at medical association meetings throughout the country

Recently, he began examining the field of adolescent child abuse, an area he believes has been ignored. "Adolescents abused in the home are not always afforded the same protection as younger children for whom it is so much easier to feel sorry and protective," he says.

Society, according to Dr. Hartman, sometimes takes the attitude that adolescents "deserve what they get" and many people believe the adolescent needs a "little knocking around" to keep him or her in line. But a "little knocking around" is the last thing in the world the teenager needs, he believes.

Dr. Hartman tells of a case in which a police officer recommended that a father whose son had been caught stealing candy give the youth a good beating to teach him a lesson.

'Dad followed the advice carefully - and to such an extent that the boy required medical attention," he

It is believed that approximately 25 percent of the nearly two million cases of child abuse reported annually deal with children between the ages of 12 and 18

Hartman says society in general, law enforcement officials and many doctors aren't sympathetic to, or aware of, the problems associated with adolescent abuse

'They feel a child that old can run away from the situation," Hartman says. "But this isn't always true."

Also, he explains, some of the situations youths become involved with when they run away are often just as bad as the situations they

"They run away, leaving school without adequate preparation for a vocation to become involved in crime, prostitution, drugs, alcohol, pornography, jail, psychiatric wards and death.

He emphasizes that a great proportion of adolescent suicide may be attributed to abuse that no one knows about. This abuse, he says, can involve actual physical abuse, sexual abuse or neglect.

Some doctors tend to avoid it

(working with adolescents)," he says. "It is messy. Teen-agers are hard to work with

'Adolescents are difficult. They are rebelling against society and family and it takes a very special kind of person to work with them to listen to their troubles instead of just giving advice.

Often, the abused adolescent teenager requires institutionalization. As an example, he tells the story of a girl he calls Karen.

She is a 14-year-old epileptic, overweight, unattractive. withdrawn, hostile and has tried running away

Suicides may be attributed to this

Hartman says the child appears to have been a scapegoat for her family, molested by her father and avoided by her peers. She finally was rejected by her parents, who requested foster placement.

A dramatic increase in her seizures was noted in the foster home and the girl eventually tried suicide. She was placed in a psychiatric ward of a San Bernardino County hospital.

Dr. Hartman has three letters written by the unhappy girl.

Part of one of the letters says, 'The reason I've been feeling down is because I have been thinking of killing myself and I know I don't myself. 'I'm scared and afraid and I need someone to help me. Please help

Hartman says studies have shown that physically abused children demonstrate more self-destructive behavior than normal children. Adding to the problem, says Hartman, is the teen-ager's natural tendency, at that age, to challenge authority, and engage in activities embarrassing or humiliating to the

Additionally, violence and antisocial behavior become natural outlets for the intense anger and hostility many abused teen-agers

Hartman believes many crimes of violence, including murder of parents, can be attributed to abused

But conversely, many abused adolescents turn their anger inward. such as those who attempt suicide.

Hospital in Fontana, describes adolescent abuse as an "overlooked crime in our society." Those years between 12 and 18, which he calls a "process of pain," are often magnified by abuse. The old wishing well on the grounds of the Adobe de Palomares welcomes visitors to the historical site. The adobe is open Tuesdays

Adobe de Palomares in Pomona

Romance of past captivating

The romance of the past captivates visitors when they pass through the gate into the yard of

Adobe de Palomares in Pomona.

Wandering around the T-shaped home, one can picture the parties once held in the patio area at the back. There would have been dashing men, women in skirts of lace flounces and scampering children.

The Adobe de Palomares is located at 491 E. Arrow Highway, Pomona, known by the California State Park Commission as Historical Landmark No. 372. The building and grounds are open to the public from 2 to 5 p.m. daily except Mondays and major holidays. Visitors can explore the inside rooms, the grounds and even have a picnic in one area of the yard.

The story of the adobe goes back to 1837 when Don Ygnacio Palomares and Don Ricardo Vejar of the Pueblo of Los Angeles, petitioned the Mexican governor, Juan Bautista Alvarado. They sought the two leagues of vacant land, approximately 15,000 acres, marked on the crude maps as "San Jose."

Upon learning their petition had been granted, Palomares and Vejar loaded their families and worldly goods into rumbling carretas and accompanied by their vaqueros, servants and livestock, set out to establish their haciendas on the newly acquired Rancho San Jose.

Don Ygnacio built his first dwelling near the present Ganesha Park. It was the first home built in this community. The building still stands at 15969 N. Park Ave., Pomona, and is open to tours on Sunday afternoons from 2 to 5.

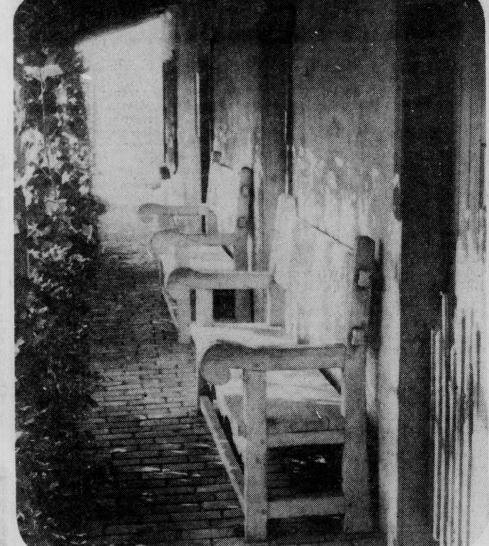

Don Ricardo Vejar, however, chose a spot near the rolling hills a few miles to the south.

Finally, in the early 1850s, Don Ygnacio decided the time had come to build the house of his dreams to provide more ample room for his family, and to have a home to entertain his ever -widening circle of friends and acquaintances.

Indians set to work making the huge quantity of adobe bricks and hauling timbers from the mountains. In 1854 the Adobe de Palomares was finished. The complex included 13 rooms with a cloth ceiling and shake roof. The housewarming that followed was long remembered in the valley.

Don Ygnacio and his wife, Dona Concepcion Lopez de Palomares, became popular hosts having many fiestas with barbecues, dancing and other festivities celebrated, and deaths were recorded with the passing years.

Don Ygnacio died on Nov. 25, 1864, and as the years became decades, then almost a century, the once proud hacienda disintegrated into crumbling ruins. But in 1934, recognizing its historic value in preserving for posterity the memory of this glamorous past, the city of Pomona acquired the homesite.

The casa now is restored to its original form and appearance. The furnishings were not in the original home, but have been donated over the years by persons interested in preserving the history of that era.

Restoration was made possible by the Historical Society of Pomona Valley in cooperation with the federal government, civic-minded groups, the city and many individuals.

Since April 6, 1940, visitors have been coming to the adobe. Kathleen Hull, curator, said up to 8,000 persons tour the home each year, not counting the many tours she conducts for school children. Mrs. Hull expressed the desire to have more people visit and take advantage of the picnic area, a spot used by several groups for summer

Arriving at the site, visitors enter the first room to be built where the family lived until the whole casa was finished. The area later was used as "La Tiendita" or little store, and here, neighboring ranchers could buy basic needs such as sugar, flour, candles and tobacco. The original credit book of the little store is exhibited in the room. Also shown there are clothes of the period for men and women, a statue and robes used for an altar, and trunks and saddles.

The son's small room has cases on both walls displaying ropes, spurs, bullet makers and other related items. In another case are bridal nightgowns of the Victorian period and children's gowns.

In the parent's first bedroom and in the daughter's bedroom are beautiful beds, chests and commodes typical of the generation. On the daughter's commode is a rare, complete ceramic set of German Meissen ware dating 1850-1875. The pieces include the water pitchers, large bowl and chamber pot.

All rooms open onto the narrow porch which runs on the four insides of the T-shape structure.

The main part of the house has a large living room in the center, the "new" master bedroom on the east end and a guest room on the west.

In the master bedroom, the oldest piece of furniture in the house stands on the south wall. It is a wardrobe which belonged to Don Jose Antonio Yorba when he came to Mexico from Spain in 1767, then from Mexico to California in 1769.

The living room has two Victorian pianos — one a massive Knabe instrument made in Baltimore in 1866. The other is a piano forte (smaller keyboard) made by John Broadwood and Sons, 1825 to 1830, in London, England.

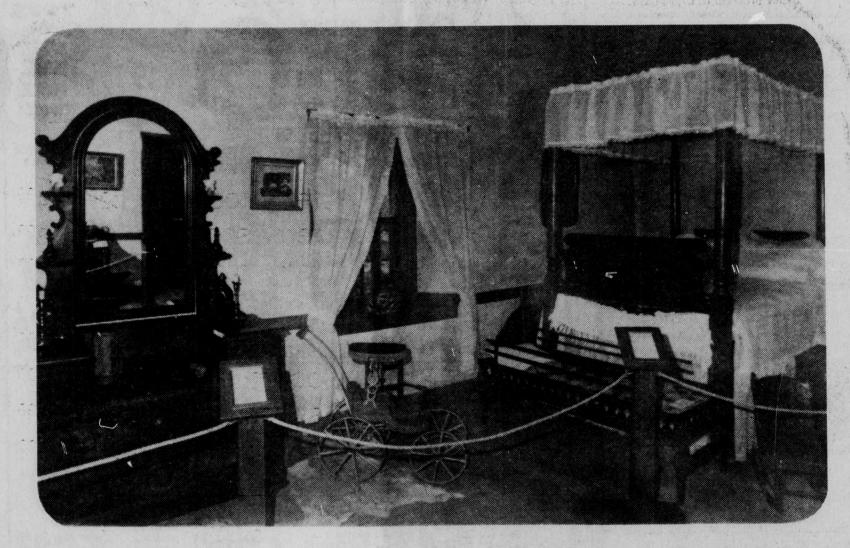

There are many other Victorian pieces of furniture and many pieces of old and rare china displayed.

Every item is clearly marked with a story about its history and who donated it. Such is the complete bedroom set in the guest bedroom made in England and brought to California in 1840.

As Mrs. Hull pointed out, the Victorian furniture from England and the East Coast had to reach California either by ship around Cape Horn, or across country in a wagon train. A visit to Adobe de Palomares is free, but gift donations are welcomed. Anyone interested in membership in the Historical Society of Pomona Valley, Inc., can receive information at the adobe. A book called, "Historical Narrative" by Bess Adams Garner written in 1939, tells the history of the Pomona Valley and the adobe, and may be purchased there. A new book on the Azuza area, Rancho Azusa, also can be purchased. This is called "British Ranchero in Old California or the Life and Times of Henry Dalton,' and is written by Sheldon G. Jackson.

History abounds at Adobe de Palomares. Cars swish past, brakes may screech or a jet may roar overhead, but none of these disturb the quiet and peaceful setting preserved for the home of Don Ygnacio.

north wall of the living room over the Knabe piano is this picture of Mrs. Luis Arenas, the youngest sister of Don Ygancio Palomares, who owned the hacienda. There are other portraits of citizens of the Victorian era hanging on the adobe walls.

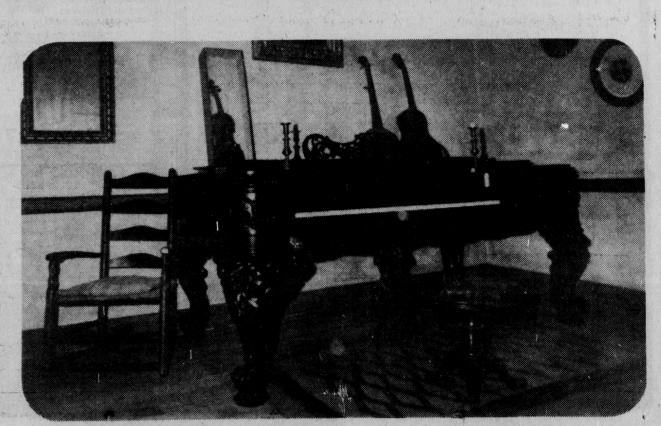

Hanging in splendor on the

The master bedroom of the Adobe de Palomares, 491 E. Arrow Highway, Pomona, has a canopy bed and ornate dresser. On the wall opposite the bed is an adobe fireplace, and behind the door of the room is a tall wardrobe brought to California by Don Jose Antonio Yorba in 1769.

In one corner of the Adobe de Palomares living room is a massive Knabe piano which came from Baltimore, Md., in 1866. This is not an original piece of furniture belonging to the adobe, but was donated when the historical site was renovated in 1930s.

Looking at some dried plants at the Adobe de Palomares in Pomona are Kathleen Hull, curator of the historic site, and her daughter, Heather. The dried plants are indigenous to the area during the 1880s and were dried and used for dyeing yarn.

With peaches and nectarines in season, what could be better than this cold souffle made with yogurt or an ambrosial, creamy drink with the mixture put together in a blender. Both are ideal for the hot days of summer and for good health.

Yogurt ideal for summer dessert

The sweet juiciness of fresh fruit calls for a special dairy partner. Something that's cool, satiny smooth and extra refreshing. Yogurt, no doubt, comes to mind! Dairy sour cream probably does too. These remarkable cultured milk products bring out the best in all summer fruits. Their tangy flavors never masks the delicate flavor of the fruit. Yogurt is light in texture and modest in calories which makes it an ideal choice for June Dairy Month desserts.

Here are two ambrosial concoctions featuring yogurt and milk with fresh nectarines or peaches. Nectarines by the way, are in season from early June until September. The cold souffle has diced nectarines folded into the sweet gelatin thickened yogurt mixture. Its creamy texture is accented with a bit of kirsch. This dessert is very easy to put together and may be molded in a six-cup souffle dish or in individual molds. Either way, it's a showy ending to a summer menu.

For a spirited creamy drink simply whiz diced nectarines or peaches, yogurt, milk and liqueur in the blender. Serve well chilled in pretty stemmed glasses. It makes a cooling, light and refreshing dessert.

The milk industry consumer information specialists advise that the characteristic tartness of yogurt comes from a special lactic acid culture used in producing it from milk. Both plain and fruit flavored yogurt are widely distributed in carton sizes ranging from 8 ounces to 32-ounces. Milk of course is always available in cartons sized just right for all needs. All milk products are perishable and should be protected from summer heat by storing in the refrigerator.

Camps for blind children scheduled

The Christian Record Braille Foundation has scheduled more than 30 camps for blind children this summer, according to Dr. Jim Walters, pastor of North Hills Seventh - day Adventist Church.

The foundation, which provides many services for blind and partially sighted people is celebrating 80 years of service. Their national camps for blind children began in 1967 to give blind youngsters between the ages of 9 and 19 opportunity to swim, hike, make friends and even participate in balloon archery - thus emphasizing the "I can do," rather than "I can't - I am different.

"There is no cost to the campers," says Walters, "except transportation to and from the camp. The program includes canoeing, horseback riding, crafts, campfires - even Beeper Baseball where kids hear the ball coming.

The foundation receives no government aid for the program. It is funded by gifts, wills, legacies and public contributions. The blind camp at Wawona in Yosemite still has room. If you know a blind or visually impaired child who would enjoy this experience, please call toll free 800-228-4189.

Stevens breaks knee pants jinx

By NANCY ANDERSON

Copley News Service HOLLYWOOD - Traditionally. movies and television shows which have placed American actors in knee pants have bombed. British actors seem able to show and to more applause, but even debonaire, British-born Cary Grant, after years of Americanization, laid an egg in knee pants in "The Howards of Virginia.

Now, though, it appears that young Andrew Stevens has broken the jinx, for "The Bastard," an Operation Prime Time mini-series in which he played the illegitimate son of a French nobleman caught up in the American Revolution, was so successful that he's essaying the character again in "The Rebels."

This is another OPT mini-series which aired recently for two nights in some localities and for four nights in others

Over light lunch in the Polo Lounge, the posh pump room of the Beverly Hills Hotel, Stevens conceded that some actors "don't translate to period stuff.

But," he went on, "I started acting on stage so early I learned not to rely on my pockets," which is a handy attribute for an actor wearing tight, knee-length, pocketless britches.

Stevens is son of actress Stella Stevens and husband of actress Kate Jackson, but doesn't like to talk about either very much, not that he isn't fond of both

But he's cagey lest he be exploited by writers more interested in his mother and his bride than in

He was born in Memphis and finished high school there between trips to Los Angeles to see his mom.

He attended college in Los Angeles where he appeared in college theatrical productions and sought out an agent

Stevens made his television debut in "Adam 12" and, after considerable television and motion picture work, achieved star rank with two films, "The Fury" and "The Boys in Company C.

Reared by his grandmother and grandfather, Stevens thinks, "My grandparents always knew I was atypical.

"I began acting when I was in junior high school, and when I was 16 years old in Memphis, I decided to lose my Southern accent (to further a theatrical career).

He might have developed a split personality, because part of the time Andrew "lived in Beverly Hills in a house with a pool and went to private school, and part of the time I lived in a small, two-bedroom house in Memphis and went to public school. But fortunately I was easily assimilated by each environment. Though Stevens got a car and a motorcycle for his 16th birthday, he doesn't think he was spoiled.

By ILA WALES Staff Writer

Provocative wall pieces and sculptures designed by John Garrett and colorful works by Lynn Fash are displayed at Griswold's Art Gallery, 555 W. Foothill Blvd., Claremont, through Aug. 5. Gallery hours are from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Sunday.

Garrett's designs use a variety of fiber materials, with bamboo and other materials sewn to wire meshes. Fash's silk screens, oils and watercolors reveal a complexity of design and sensitive treatment.

Landscapes and seascapes in watercolors by Judi Kline of Claremont will be shown at Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 399 North Garey Ave., Pomona, this month.

An avid photographer, Mrs. Kline uses her own slides and photographs in her works. She is a member of the Pomona Valley Art Association, the Chino Art Association and the Fontana Art Association.

A reception for artist Olive Clapp is scheduled this afternoon at the North Gallery of the Edward-Dean Museum, 9401 Oak Glen Road, Cherry Valley. The reception, from 2 to 4 p.m., introduces an exhibit of Mrs. Clapp's watercolors and serigraphs.

Mrs. Clapp uses animals and plant life as models. A San Bernardino artist, she is a member of Watercolor West. Edward-Dean museum hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and from 1 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

"Anthropology and Art: An Overview" will be discussed by Richard L. Anderson July 16 at a Cal Poly

Smog panel budget cuts inspections at industries

Staff Writer

WEST COVINA - The regional air pollution control board adopted a $19.1 million budget Friday for smog-fighting efforts in Southern California, up from $17.5 million spent in the past year

Despite the increased budget and the addition of five inspectors, the South Coast Air Quality Management District will still have to reduce annual inspections of polluting industries by 5 percent this

A board committee had proposed deletion of all 10 additional inspectors recommended by J.A. "Jeb" Stuart, the district's executive officer. But a successful motion by Los Angeles County Supervisor Yvonne Brathwaite Burke restored five of them.

The district has the responsibility for controlling pollutants from industries, power plants and refineries in four Southern California counties, including the valley and mountain areas of San Bernardino County.

The adopted budget requires no increases in the fees the district charges to polluting industries. The district board more than doubled those fees after Proposition 13's passage last year to offset the loss of counties' property tax

The increased budget includes a one-time grant of $1 million from the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency for replacement of equipment at the district's far-flung monitoring stations.

Other increases include $400,000 from district reserves for equipment replacement, $114,483 for five additional inspectors and their equipment, and $100,371 for a revived mobile air monitoring program and continued monitoring specific pollutants at several

The budget will raise the number of district employees from 485 to 498. The enforcement division will have 131 employees, compared with 126 at the end of the fiscal year and 115 budgeted a year ago.

Most of the board's two hours of discussion Friday centered on whether the district should draw money from its reserves to satisfy some of Stuart's budget requests.

The board's fiscal committee told Stuart last month to submit proposed cuts that would eliminate the need to spend reserve money. Among the cuts were the 10 additional inspectors Stuart had recommended to beef up enforcement at refineries and gasoline stations.

Asked by Los Angeles City Councilman Marvin Braude what effect that cut might have, Stuart replied, "We can do the job but not as well as without the cuts.

Braude said the district should spend some of its surplus money, particularly for enforcement, because our credibility is at

Los Angeles County Supervisor Peter F. Schabarum said a large surplus was "prudent" and "well justified." He was critical of district enforcement practices during second-stage smog alerts last

The board failed on three separate roll calls to muster the six votes needed for approval of the budget.

But Supervisor Burke, at her first meeting since she was appointed to replace James A. Hayes last month, broke the deadlock.

Her motion to include five of the 10 additional inspectors in the budget passed 7-2, with Braude and Schabarum dissenting.

The budget will carry over an estimated $2.8 million, although some of that has been reserved for insurance and equipment

Supervisors clear way for county senior citizens' day care centers

The board of supervisors cleared the way Monday for the establishment of day care centers for senior citizens in San Bernardino

The board accepted a state plan that will guide the county in setting up the centers. Of seven regions within the county, the West Valley was one of two areas rated second priority and could have a licensed center sometime in the next year.

The centers would provide a variety of health and social services to seniors during the day. They would enable seniors to stay in their own homes and out of nursing homes and other institutions if 24-hour care

The applications will be reviewed by a local advisory council established by the supervisors last year and by the supervisors themselves if they request it.

Only five centers have been licensed in California so far.

James Fare, county Human Resources Agency administrator, said four organizations have shown an interest in setting up centers. They were identified as Loma

Linda University, Mojave Valley Senior Citizens' Club, Bridges Inc. and Needles Community Hospital. Each center would serve an estimated 40 persons daily. The cost is expected to be about $24,000 per The centers are not meant to replace senior citizens' centers. However, the centers do have to show they will not duplicate services and must be able to provide

Board 'may be losing' its war on smog

WEST COVINA - The regional air pollution control board learned Friday it may be losing the war against the kind of smog common in Southern California.

A report issued by the South Coast Air Quality Management District staff indicates that Southern California's skies haven't gotten much cleaner during the past several years. The report says San Bernardino County's air quality has probably worsened.

The district board urged President Carter to appoint a blueribbon committee to study the situation and return in six months with proposals that are 'environmentally effective, energy conscious and politically acceptable.

'We are deeply concerned ... that this report shows that we may be losing the war on air pollution,' Riverside County Supervisor Alfred McCandless, the board chairman, said in a letter to Carter.

'Despite a multibillion dollar effort by government, industry and the public, there has been no net progress in oxidant control in the past six years.

"The latest data for 1978 suggests that the situation may, in fact, be deteriorating.

Photochemical smog in Southern California is created when hydrocarbons react chemically with oxides of nitrogen in sunshine. This kind of smog is expressed in terms of oxidants or ozone

For inland San Bernardino and Riverside counties, "ozone concentrations have increased since the mid-1960s to the point where they are now similar to those measured in the worst portions of Los Angeles County," the report

The extremely high concentrations of ozone recorded from the mid-1950s to the early 1970s no longer occur, the report says. But monitoring stations in Upland and Fontana recorded Southern California's highest one-hour concentrations of ozone between 1974 and 1977 and came close to doing so in 1973 and 1978

"We believe that the primary reason for this (worsened air quality) is the failure of long-term national policies to control emissions from automobiles, McCandless said. "These mobile source emissions appear to be on the increase despite all efforts to get them under control.

J. Wayne Wilson, center, receives a congratulatory plaque from the Professional Photographers of the Inland Empire in ceremonies in Riverside recently. Wilson is a partner in in Norenberg-Wilson Photography of Pomona. The company specializes in commercialindustrial photography. Wilson was honored for service as president of the Professional Photographers of the Inland Empire in 1978-79. Presenting the award are Allen Rodel of Imperial Beach and Johannes Hedrich of Loma Linda.

SANBAG to press for more road funds

By VANCE DURGIN Staff Writer

Directors of San Bernardino Associated Governments (SANBAG) voted Tuesday to seek more money for highway construction than the state wants to give them.

After hearing a report that a SANBAG plan to spend $8 million on Foothill Freeway right of way acquisition was pared to $900,000 by the state Transportation Commission, directors voted to mount an appeal to the state panel.

The appeal as approved by directors won't seek any additional money for the foothill route, but could result in more money for a widening project on Route 71 near

That project received no money from the commission, but is instead was listed as the subject of a study. Two other construction projects had their funds deleted and were to be "studied" instead as a result of the commission's action last week. "Looks like we're going to be the most studied county in the state," quipped SANBAG Executive Director Wes McDaniel. This year was the first in which transportation spending programs were to be approved through what amounts to an adversary process between regional transportation boards like SANBAG and the state Department of Transportation (Caltrans)

Under the new process, the Transportation Commission makes the final decision on how transportation money will be spent after reviewing proposals submitted by both regional boards and

In the transportation plans submitted by San Bernardino and Los Angeles counties, some $13 million was budgeted to buy land in the foothill route corridor which is threatened by development.

Caltrans, however, opposed such spending.

The commission last week bought the Caltrans position, and okaved $1 million split evenly between the two counties for right of way acquistion.

San Bernardino County received an additional $400,000 to acquire a portion of the freeway corridor in San Bernardino

Though McDaniel expressed disappointment in the commission's action, he pointed out it was probably unrealistic to expect large sums to be approved for the freeway before a study of the route currently being conducted is completed.
